

Distributed Dynamic Process Control System

Abstract

Process management system for highly distributed and dynamic processes comprising: an instance of a process schema been attached to a process data; a controller component capable of interpreting the process schema without the need for the centralized process management; an agent component capable of modifying the process schema for the given process instance; an agent component acting as interface between the process management and an execution system.